The Seasons of Our Lives: A Plea to Parents to Consider Reform Jewish Summer Camps

Message from Rabbi Michael L. Feshbach

I love living in Washington! On a personal level, there is a sense of wholeness for me, a completion, of having come home. More broadly, I love that local news is often national or international news. I love not being in such a minority in following the minutia of political developments. I love the cosmopolitan feeling, the exciting work so many people do, the diversity of the population. I love the Jewish culture here, and I love the options for Asian food.

But there are some things I am less than fond of. One, of course, is the traffic. The other is something that flows from that: not just the press of the crowds, but the pressure to make decisions. What I find particularly frustrating is how fast you have to make a decision about what you are doing, and what you are doing with children, the following summer. I remember living in a place where you could still sign up for a popular summer camp in early May. Here: hesitate and lose! Visit to explore, a day after registration opens, and chances are there will be no spaces left.

There is one summer decision, though, which was easy for us to make. At some point, I knew, our kids would be old enough... to go to a Reform movement (Union for Reform Judaism, URJ) summer camp. And so this summer our boys will be attending Camp Harlam, in the Poconos, in Pennsylvania.

(As good as Harlam is, and as excited as I am about sending our children there... Harlam serves at least three URJ regions—the Pennsylvania region, the New Jersey region, and our Mid-Atlantic Council. There has been a great deal of effort towards the creation of a new camp just for our Mid-Atlantic region. So many people have worked towards that goal—they have worked so hard, and for so many years. Two sites were actually purchased recently. The first failed the environmental test, though, and was returned. The second would have been ideal in many ways—but was purchased on the contingency of raising enough money from our region to pay for it. Through the efforts of many people, the region raised several million dollars... and were several million dollars short of what was needed. That deal fell through. That site, too, was returned. So the region, as it were, holds its breath, and waits for another opportunity in the future. That day will come. In the meantime, we remain part of the Camp Harlam world.)

In rabbinical school I worked on the staff of the national high school leadership camp, URJ Camp Kutz. And in the summer of 2000, I served on the rabbinic faculty of URJ Camp George, in the mountain country north of Toronto, during that camp's inaugural season.

Why are these camps so special? What makes them so important? What is it about them that changes and deepens the lives of most of those who go there?

Almost any Jewish summer camp achieves some of what I write about below. Certainly there are many good things to say about the other Jewish camps in our area: Capital Camps, Louise, and others. And people who are already connected to and through those camps have the beginning of a network of friendships that is likely to last a lifetime. So what I have to say about our URJ camps is not necessarily only true about those camps, but it is especially true about them.

We live our lives in a kind of bifurcation that is so much a part of our everyday existence we hardly even notice it. There are our “Jewish” lives, and our “general” lives, “Jewish” time and, for some, “real” time or, “most of the time.” We refer to Religious School or Hebrew School in contrast to “regular” school, as if there is not a real implication to that phrase. We relegate our Jewish lives to the “irregular,” the “unusual,” and that quickly becomes the “secondary,” the “add-on” to the ordinary and ongoing flow of our lives.

At a Jewish summer camp, without fuss or force, the worlds of our lives come together. Being Jewish is an integrated, ordinary, everyday thing. And the impact of that simple change on the lives of our young people is... extraordinary! It is one of those experiences (like describing Israel to someone who has not been there) where words fail, and it is hard to convey the importance of the experience—or the experience of such “importance.”

And with a dozen or more Reform rabbis, cantors or educators filling the “faculty” during every two week slot at our movement camps, the usual experience of climbing and hiking and kayaking and art and theater and the full range of expected camp activities has an added dimension, a greater depth, and a level of Jewish meaning that slips right on in, just as “fun” and “regular” as everything else.

And so, as your rabbi and as a parent, as a person committed to the Jewish future, I plead with our parents and grandparents: please know how important this experience is, for your children and grandchildren. Check out the websites, speak with people who have been there, please seriously consider the gift this will be... for all our children. (Camp Harlam's URL is <http://harlam.urjcamp.org>)

Two more things. First: The Jewish community wants to help kids go to Jewish camps. There are synagogue funds available (and those funds also accept contributions to them, as well as requests to use them), as well as community funds (especially for first-time campers). Please see me, or please see our Director of Education, JoHanna Potts, about how to access these funds.

And finally: please act quickly. Because like so many other options in this area, spaces fill fast.

But do act on this if you can. For the sense of “wholeness,” of “completion,” of “at-home-ness” that most of our kids feel at our URJ Camps... is hard to match, anywhere else.

Rabbi Michael L. Feshbach

FROM RABBI SEROTTA

A Gift to Myself or “Oy Vey – Not Another Thing to Do ?!!”

Message from Rabbi Gerry Serotta

When non-Jews present themselves before a Beit Din to be accepted into the Jewish people, (for “conversion,” which means to me “mutual adoption into the Jewish people,”) there is one question I always ask. According to the Talmud, when someone comes to adopt our way of life we are to make sure that they understand the specific value of Tzedakah (doing justice and charity.) Likewise we are obliged to acquaint them with some of mitzvos kalot (the Hebrew means light or easy commandments) and the mitzvos chamurot (the stringent or hard commandments.) However, the Talmud does not provide examples to indicate which is which! So I like to ask folks in their own experience what elements of Jewish practice do they find easy to follow and which are difficult for them.

Not surprisingly, since Shabbat is one of the central practices of Judaism (after all, one seventh of our life is Shabbat), Shabbat is mentioned regularly. The amazing thing is that the majority of Jews-by-Choice who mention it say that Shabbat has been “easy” or “joyful” to them. Some naturally report, however, that they have found it challenging to slow down their pace and enjoy a meal with candles, conversation, and reflecting on their blessings, to attend services, or to otherwise make the day special and unique.

I was reminded of this “de novo” consideration of Shabbat on the part of those joining our people, by recent comments reported to me as verbalized during a Family Education program in the Sunday school. One parent reported that our emphasis on Shabbat was troubling and burdensome to her or him. (I have no idea who this was.) I suppose that any of the practices of Judaism which occur at a specific time, especially those which occur regularly may seem to some people at some point in their lives as a burden rather than as a gift.

But those who know the approach of our congregation know that we feel strongly that Shabbat ought to be, and we claim is in fact, a gift that we can give ourselves and our families. How can we make this so? Given the lives so many (too many?) of us lead, especially those raising children, where can we find the space to slow down, to give ourselves permission to leave behind the oppressive elements of our overscheduled lives and work so that we learn again how to play, to recreate instead of create, to read and study for pleasure rather than to accomplish some task?

Shabbat means literally to “stop doing,” to fast from work. The related Hebrew word “shevithah” means “strike” in the sense of a labor action. How is it that someone who encounters this concept anew can see it as liberating, as providing a rhythm and pattern to our lives which seem out of control, while others respond to it as “you are making me do something else?”

The very comment itself seems to suggest the need to take control of our lives. One of the ways you can do this is by beginning to find at least one part of Shabbat which can be your special island in time, whether that means one of the meal times from Friday through Saturday nights, or whether it means joining friends for spiritual and intellectual inspiration (we have multiple options every week including a relaxed and informal Shabbat Worship and Study Service 10 AM all year round.)

When we began experimenting four years ago with a Shabbat at Home

evening dinner with other Temple Shalom members, we produced a four page booklet called “The Gift of Shabbat.” I encourage you to take another look. If you don’t have your copy, we’d be delighted to send you another. It contains not just the traditional blessings in Hebrew, English, and transliteration, but also “practical spiritual recipes” for non-traditional ways to add the special “soul” that traditionally enters each of us for 24 plus hours every week when the sun sets on Friday evening.

We are going to do it again this year on January 26-27, 2007, with the traditional hosting and “greeting” of every single member of the congregation who wants to participate, singles, children, families of all types. And we will add some new elements on Saturday. Our Shabbat Worship and Study service, which is typically attended by an intimate one or two dozen folks, will expand to include all comers—although still retaining its intimacy, informality, and participatory discussion of the torah reading. A potluck Shabbat lunch will continue the spirit of the morning with singing and noshing and the conclusion of Shabbat will be marked with a joyful havdalah program, not for kids only, including guests who will enlighten and entertain.

But all of these special events of that weekend are only indications of some of the elements which can be a part of your life every week of the year, whether you spend some of that time with us at Temple (which of course we encourage because we love seeing you and being with you!) or you discover other parts of the island, reading, spending quality family time, walking (there’s even a Yiddish word for it, shpabtziren!) or just being content.

We still think Shabbat is a gift for you—maybe you haven’t figured out how to unwrap it. If you need help, any one of us at the Temple will be delighted to be there to teach, advise, or encourage. As the early Zionist thinker Achad Ha-Am wrote, it is more accurate to say that Shabbat provides for the Jewish people than that the Jews have provided for or observed the Shabbat. We hope this can be really true in your life as well. When we say Shabbat Shalom we include all meanings of Shalom, not just peace but well-being and completeness. We all need this kind of Shalom in our lives.

Rabbi Gerry Serotta

Summary of the Minutes of the Meeting of the Board of Trustees— Nov. 9, 2006

The meeting opened at 7:30 PM with the D'var Toarah led by Ed Beeman. The minutes were approved as written and the meeting was well attended.

Those who attended the MAC Biennial gave an overview of their experiences. The attendees were mostly enthusiastic about the various workshops in which they participated. Rabbi Feshbach received positive feedback on his presentation and kudos were given to Joan Kalin who put a great deal of time into helping during the whole event. Many commented that the services were outstanding, especially the Friday night service hosted by Temple Beth Ami. Rabbi Eric Yoffie, President of the URJ, spoke at this service as well.

All are encouraged to make plans to attend the convention in December 2007 in San Diego with the reminder that members of the congregation are invited to attend as well as the Board members.

School Report: JoHanna Potts gave the school report which included the results of the Back to School discussion which was engendered by the handout on the Brit (Partnership) between the school and the parents. Many interesting and complex ideas arose from this discussion. A lively and thoughtful, interesting discussion took place around the Brit between the school and parents. The number of students in the religious school as of this date equals 403 students, which is about what was projected.

Parlor Meetings: The upcoming parlor meetings were explained by Andrea Mark. Members of the congregation will host the meetings of about fifteen people each. The point of this endeavor is to ask "What do you want Temple Shalom to be like in the Future?"

Financial Secretary's Report: Alan Lewis presented the losses and gains in membership. This is an ongoing yearly tally and there is a natural attrition. The status of current dues collection, mortgage maintenance and prior billings was also given. As far as membership in relationship to the school enrollment, Johanna Potts said that the Wednesday 6:45 PM Hebrew class is a major attraction. Added to this, the ability to switch classes temporarily along with the school's high expectations increases the desire to enroll children in our school.

Good and Welfare was held with the reminder of these events: The Holiday Sale December 3rd. Our fund raiser Party will occur on March 3rd.

MEET OUR BOARD

Steve Sacks—URJ Counsel, Ex-Officio Board Member

Steve and Helene Sacks have been members of Temple Shalom for over 25 years. For many years, Steve served as Temple Shalom's Legal Counsel. Helene was the Temple's Executive Director and retired several years ago. Steve is a senior partner at Arnold & Porter in Washington and specializes in litigation. For the last three years he has served as one of the national officers of the Union for Reform Judaism and is the Legal Counsel for both the URJ and the World Union for Progressive Judaism.

From the Financial Secretary

Dear Fellow Congregants,

There are always lots of things going on in our lives in December, not the least of which may be thinking about that this is the last month of the tax year and that there may be benefits to getting caught up on your commitments to Temple Shalom for Membership Dues, Sanctuary Fund or Mortgage Maintenance, Religious School charges and contributions to the many Special Funds that support aspects of the Temple's various programs and needs.

Although December is the end of the secular year, it is only the midpoint in the Temple's fiscal year. That make this a good time to review your December Statement when it arrives to be sure you're caught-up and to consider advanced payments for the other charges that will be coming on the next six months' statements. From the Temple's point of view, your advanced payments for charges that will come due in January through June 2007, give us a cushion to meet the expenses that always arise during the harder, colder weather of the winter months and the April showers that may test the few sections of our aging roof that haven't been replaced in the past year or two. Membership Dues pay the clergy and administrative staff salaries and general operating costs. Sanctuary Fund payments support capital projects, not the least of which will be the desperately needed new folding doors between the Sanctuary and Social Hall. Mortgage Maintenance payments support those costs. Religious School fees pay the salaries for the teachers and administration that support our programs and activities for the more than 400 students who attend.

The various Special Funds, and recent contributions to them, are described elsewhere in this edition of The Shofar. I can't say the funds range from A-to-Z but they do range from A-to-Y: the Adele D. Lewis Memorial Teachers Fund to the Youth Fund. All deserve your consideration.

... and what better way is there to remember departed loved ones than to purchase a Memorial Plaque. The Plaques are mounted on the back wall of the Sanctuary and are moved to a special location near the entrance to the Sanctuary during the week of that loved one's annual Yahrzeit. (On a personal note, I have plaques for my parents who are buried on Long Island, NY. I don't get there often enough so their names in our Sanctuary gives me a nearby, special and sacred place to pause and reflect on their lives and my own. I do it often.)

Returning to the practical: payments, contributions and purchases made before December 31st may have tax advantages for you. They also give us that cushion to get over the final months of the fiscal year.

Best wishes for a happy and healthy 2007,

Alan Lewis

Dear Fellow Temple Shalom Congregants:

Over the next couple of months, we will be hosting a series of “parlor meetings” – small group discussions about the future of Temple Shalom. What activities and programs are most important to you? What keeps our kids engaged in Jewish learning? What inspires you to be involved in Temple life? How do you see Temple Shalom developing in the next five years, and beyond? We want to hear your ideas and dreams so we can work together to build a vision for our congregation’s future.

Please choose to attend a meeting that works for your schedule or location. RSVP to the Temple office at 301-587-2273 or info@templeshalom.net and let us know which meeting you would like to attend. Space is limited so we are asking that you provide a second choice as well.

We have also included a survey document for you to complete. Please take the time to fill it out and return it to the Temple by December 18th. The survey can also be completed on line by going to www.templeshalom.net and clicking on the button marked “Membership Survey.”

We look forward to sharing the results of our survey and findings of our parlor meetings with you in the spring.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me at 301-493-5833 or president@templeshalom.net. I look forward to seeing you at one of our parlor meetings.

B’Shalom,
Andrea Mark, President

Kol Hakavod to JoHanna Potts

Honored as the Ammerman Distinguished Alumna

On November 5, 2006 at the Partnership for Jewish Life and Learning Professional Day, our Director of Education was honored as this year's recipient of the Dr. Harvey H. Ammerman Distinguished Alumni Award. This award is given to an alumna or alumnus of the George Washington University Cooperative Graduate program who has established a name in the community as a director of a program or an innovative teacher and whose work has contributed to the growth of Jewish life and learning in the greater Washington Jewish Community. The Cooperative Graduate Program is a joint venture of The George Washington University School of Education and Human Development and the Partnership for Jewish Life and Learning to educate and support professional Jewish educators.

In presenting the award to JoHanna, Rabbi Dr. Jacob Halpern, Dean of the Cooperative Program, cited JoHanna's work here at Temple Shalom and as Director of the Middle School at Geshet and the founding director of the Primary School of Washington Hebrew Congregation saying that she had enriched not only the programs at these schools but also the Jewish life and learning of their teachers, students and parents. He also praised her many contributions to enriching Jewish life in our community pointing out that JoHanna presently serves the Washington community on 5 Boards including Jewish Education for Teens (JET), the UJA camping committee, and Israel Quest as well as having served as chairperson and member of the Greater Washington area Education Director's Council and as the Conference Co-Chair of the last international Coalition for the Advancement of Jewish Education (CAJE 31) Conference.

We here at Temple Shalom are daily recipients of her knowledge and caring and can take great pride that the greater community also recognizes the excellence she brings to her work in Jewish learning and living. Mazal tov JoHanna!

Temple Shalom Book Discussions 2006–2007

Sunday January 14—[Two for the price of one] The Assistant, by Bernard Malamud—Malamud's second novel, considered by some to be his best, a classic tale about the hopes and dreams of a Jewish grocer in Brooklyn in the 1950s; and My Father is a Book, by Janna Malamud Smith—his daughter's memoir, which offers an intimate look at Malamud's life, drawing on his correspondence and early journals

Sunday March 11—The Attack, by Yasmina Khadra—a story about a Bedouin Arab struggling to integrate himself into Israeli society, who learns that the terrorist responsible for a suicide bombing is identified by the Israeli police as his wife

Sunday, May 6—Suite Francaise, by Irene Nemirovski—the first two parts of what was envisioned as a series of five novels, which masterfully describes the German occupation of France, but was cut short when the author (an accomplished and recognized author) was deported to Auschwitz, where she died at the age of 39

Temple Shalom, 9-10:30 AM (during the early session of religious school) There is no fee to participate. All are welcome. Bagels and coffee will be served. For more information, contact Heidi Coleman, 301-588-1173

In addition, on Sunday, February 11, from 6:30–8:30 PM, the Sisterhood and Brotherhood will host an Author's Tea with Temple member Dan Spiro at Temple Shalom about his first novel The Creed Room.

Happy Reading!!

Jewish National Fund Alternative Spring Break

What is it?

Answering the needs of the Jewish homeland, Jewish National Fund (JNF) will send 250 Jewish college students, graduate students and young adults (under the age of 30) to volunteer in northern Israel during their spring break vacations this March to help with JNF's Northern Renewal Campaign.

As a result of this effort, guest houses across the region — now suffering terrible economic losses from the war — will be full, forests cleared and replanted, environmental clean-up provided, bomb shelters refurbished, and parks rebuilt.

This trip will be JNF's second annual Alternative Spring Break connecting program participants to the land and the people of Israel by working in projects benefiting communities. Last year, students had the time of their lives while experiencing what the early pioneers of Israel experienced: building the land of Israel.

Participants will spend a full week volunteering. While days will be filled with hard but fulfilling work, nights will be filled with entertainment, music, and fun. The groups will also interact with the people they are helping and hear from environmental experts and scholars to better understand the ramifications of the devastation.

When is it?

There will be two trips that correspond to most schools' spring breaks. The first is March 8–16, 2007 and the second is March 15–22, 2007.

Talmud Study for Beginners

All Comers Welcome—
No Experience Necessary

Meets Sunday 9 AM to 10:30 AM
(when Sunday School is in Session)

We continue our exploration of this fascinating but complex text (from Tractate Sanhedrin) which deals with how the Torah became a living system of justice and how the Rabbis created and developed Judaism after the destruction of the Jerusalem Temple. Issues in this text include capital punishment and the relative merits of arbitration vs. strict justice in a court, but the Talmud digresses regularly into every important religious issue including views of the nature of God.

Shalom Y'all
Sunday, January 21, 2007
5 PM

Traveling in a vintage Cadillac, Filmmaker Brian Bain, a third generation Jew from New Orleans, sets out on a 4,200-mile road trip through the American South. Traveling through the Delta flatlands, small towns in Mississippi, Texas ranches, and sprawling Sunbelt metropolises, he uncovers the unique and diverse history of Southern Jews and discovers a vibrant regional culture and hundreds of years of rich history. A Southern-style buffet dinner will be served immediately following the film.

RENAISSANCE

Please join the Renaissance Group for its Annual Movie and dinner night on Sunday, January 21, 2007 at 5 PM. The film being screened this year is Shalom Y'All, a documentary that highlights the unique and diverse history of Southern Jews. A buffet dinner will follow. Details about this activity appear elsewhere in this edition of the Shofar.

On February 18, 2007, the Renaissance Group will go to Theatre J at the Jewish Community Center in DC to see Sleeping Arrangements, a comedy by Laura Shayne Cunningham and featuring Halo Wines and Paul Morella. Further information regarding this event is also included elsewhere in this edition of the Shofar. In March, we have arranged for tickets to a BSO Pops concert at Strathmore Hall, and in April we will visit the Jewish Chapel at the Naval Academy at Annapolis. Please check your email, the Shofar, and temple flyer mailings for more information about these events. As a further reminder, please remember to send all checks and reservation requests for Renaissance Group events to the person listed as the contact. If you have a question about who to contact, call me at 301-838-9530.

For further information about the Renaissance Group, contact me at francine311@comcast.net, 301-838-9530. Also, please let us know if you wish to be added to the Renaissance Group's email list. If you already have asked to be on this list but have changed your email address in the last six months, please forward your new address to Francine.

The Temple Shalom Renaissance Group is for Temple members over 50 who want to join other members in a variety of social activities.

Contributions are welcome to all Temple Shalom Special Purpose Funds; indeed, your donations are what make the activities supported by each fund possible. Ten dollars is the minimum contribution for each fund ($36 for the Prayerbook Fund because that buys a prayerbook with your inscription on a bookplate). Please send your contribution to the Temple Office, with a notation of whom the donation honors or memorializes, and it will appear in the Shofar. The recipient will also receive a letter telling of your donation. This is a terrific way of telling people that you care.
